Whoa, spud!

Here are some Important Vittles to Digest...

Each vehicle is unique in it's path to failure and therefore, unique in the work required to correct it.

We use our experience and technical skill to approximate how much time this (or any) job SHOULD take. (our technical skill is unrivaled, so we're dead on target quite often...)

But our skills and experience are still no match for a crystal ball or x-ray vision; so we provide this guesstimate without a price guarantee.

Additionally, we make every attempt to provide you with an accurate, "real world" guesstimate.

This is not a "lowball and surprise" guesstimate... we take possible pitfalls into consideration and so this may actually include work or parts your vehicle ends up NOT needing... (which, of course, you would NOT be charged for...)

What labor times include:

- Vehicle repair preparation
- Draining & re-filling necessary fluids
- Tightening bolts to manufacturer's torque specs
- Normal cleaning of related parts
- Position, set-up and clean up of repair
- Normal testing and verification.

What labor times DON'T include:

- Correcting previous repair attempts or non-standard repairs.
- Rework to fit a particular year/make/model
- Excessive grease, tar or undercoating removal
- Cleaning area of vehicle contaminated by failure
- Towing
- Courtesy services
- Adverse weather
- Diagnosis (unless indicated)
- Machining operations (unless indicated)
- Resetting computer after battery disconnect
- Removal of locking lug nuts or wheel covers
- Removal of corroded, rusted or degraded parts
- Broken bolts, studs, etc.

IS THE VEHICLE OLDER THAN 4 (FOUR) YEARS?

Unless the vehicle has been hermetically sealed, expect corrosion, rust and degradation. This is New Jersey. Land of road salt and potholes.
